DETAILED ACTION

Claims 5-12 and 27-31 are pending.

Regarding the charted prosecution in the instant response by Applicant, it is respectfully pointed out that some confusion did arise in the transition of prosecution from Examiner to Examiner. However, the previous and instant rejections are comprehensive and properly applied. Hence, the reasons for re-opening prosecution following the filing of Applicant's appeal brief.

112 Rejection Maintained

The rejection of claims 5-12 and 27-31 under 35 U.S.C. 112 is MAINTAINED for the reasons set forth in the Office Action mailed 10/3/03, and those found below.

Applicant argues, "it is unclear what is the basis for the examiner's holding of new matter". This argument is not persuasive. The Examiner respectfully directs Applicant to page 286 of Biochemistry by Garret and Grisham. Ceramides are produced by the reaction of sphingosine and fatty alcohols. Increasing the rate of sphingosine production does not inherently increase the rate of ceramide synthesis, as the reaction to form a ceramide requires more reactants than just the sphingosine, i.e., the fatty acid.

103 Rejection Maintained

The rejection of claims 5-12 and 27-31 under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Kurose et al. (P1 9303217) is MAINTAINED for the reasons set forth in the Office Action mailed 10/3/03, and those found below.

Applicant argues, "Kurose does not teach that 'catechins provide various benefits which as skin softening, skin moisturizing and emolliency'. The only specific recitation of effect which is attributed to catechins alone is anti-oxidant activity (see page 4). The statement made by the examiner appears to refer to the extract as a whole”. This argument is not persuasive. See for Example, page 8 of Kurose, which teaches “Cosmetic products for skin or hair with the principal function of moisture conservation” comprising “0.1 to 0.5% MTE-1”, wherein page 3 of Kurose specifically teaches catechins as members of MTE-1. The Examiner further points out that Applicant’s open-ended language does not exclude additional ingredients from the instant composition. For this reason alone, Kurose’s teaching of a composition comprising MTE-1 for skin moisturization, meets the limits of the instant claims.

Applicant argues, “There is no indication how much catechins are actually in this 20.3% range and the examiner has not established any factual basis for presuming the ranges claimed by the applicants for their method of use is taught or suggested by Kurose”. This argument is not persuasive. First, it is respectfully pointed out that it has been held that where the general conditions of a claim are disclosed in the prior art, discovering the optimum or workable ranges involves only routine skill in the art. In re Aller, 105 USPQ 233. It is respectfully pointed out that Applicant has not established any criticality of the instant ranges or difference between the instant ranges and those of Kurose. Second, it is respectfully pointed out that the catechins taught by Kurose are one of the major constituents of his composition.

Applicant argues, “for both of the decisions cited by the examiner the issue at hand was a comparison of the claimed composition with the prior art compositions, this is not the case here; all of the claims are directed toward method of using claims”. This argument is not persuasive. As pointed out in the previous Office Action, applying the same composition in the same effective amount to the skin, results in the same affect, especially since Kurose teaches his method for skin moisturization and the end result of the instant method claims is moisturization of the skin. Thus, while not explicitly stated, since the method steps are the same, their effect is the same.

Applicant argues, "such a reversal of positions cannot be explained away by changes in examiners or by changing subject matter within the claims". This argument is not persuasive. First, it is respectfully pointed out that there is nothing unusual, certainly, about an Examiner changing his viewpoint as the prosecution of a case progresses, and, so long as the rules of the Patent Office Practice are duly compiled with, an applicant has no legal complain because of such change in view. In re Ellis, 31 USPQ 380; In re Becker, 40 USPQ 624. Second, for reasons of record, the instant rejection has been applied because the Kurose et al. reference makes the instant invention obvious. Does not Applicant want a valid patent that is free from prior art?

Conclusion

THIS ACTION IS MADE FINAL. Applicant is reminded of the extension of time policy as set forth in 37 CFR 1.136(a).

A shortened statutory period for reply to this final action is set to expire THREE MONTHS from the mailing date of this action. In the event a first reply is filed within TWO MONTHS of the mailing date of this final action and the advisory action is not mailed until after the end of the THREE-MONTH shortened statutory period, then the shortened statutory period will expire on the date the advisory action is mailed, and any extension fee pursuant to 37 CFR 1.136(a) will be calculated from the mailing date of the advisory action. In no event, however, will the statutory period for reply expire later than SIX MONTHS from the mailing date of this final action.
